Expansion

- It is similar to paragraph writing, but it is mostly reflective. It may be summed up as the enlargement of an idea contained in a line or a metaphor. Generally these lines are taken from the works of thinkers and men of action and letters. They are old sayings and maxims uttered by those who achieved distinction in their respective fields. A student is required to amplify on the idea. The expansion classifies the idea more comprehensibly. The sentence given for expansion may be the conclusion of an idea. In this case a student is to give arguments and arrive at the conclusion implied in the saying. Sometimes the sentence for enlargement may be considered to be beginning and the idea has to be expanded by explanation.
